

ABSTRACT

A method of reviewing patient conditions and assessing treatment protocols is disclosed. In specific implementations, the method comprises determining both the patient's subjective medical condition and objective medical condition, and then 5 combining information about the subjective and objective conditions to generate a treatment index. This treatment index is used to determine appropriate treatment frequency.